STATE NEWS.

Androscoggin.

The workmen blasting on the ledge where Western Promenade, Auburn, intersects the new Hampshire street extension, struck a pocket rich in cabinet specimens. Some very handsome specimens of beryl have been obtained by specimen hunters. By the way we like the suggestion that Hampshire street extension be called Gamage Avenue, in respect to the memory of the man who was the energetic pusher of this public improvement, and whose sudden and deplored death occurred a few months ago.

A Lewiston merchant at daybreak, Friday, found that somebody had broken into his house and robbed him of his pocketbook. He had literally fifteen dollars in the inside pocket of his vest when he went to bed. In the morning it was not there.

It is the way women carry watches, buttoned into their dresses with a short fob appended. Mrs. Charles A. Munroe, of Kearney, thus wore her fine gold watch to City Large Hall, Lewiston, the other night, and now she thinks pickpockets are to blame because it is missing.

The premium for the best grange exhibit was awarded, Friday, to Auburn Grange, No. 4, of East Auburn. Both granges' members have worked very diligently for the honor, to be awarded the winning ones. They both have had a fine display, which does them great credit.

At the last meeting of the Lewiston Y. M. C. A., a special committee was appointed to elect a successor to Secretary Harlow. They have been busily at work considering the qualifications of several candidates, and feel confident that the right man can be found by October 1st, at which time Mr. Harlow leaves for his new field of labor.

Cumberland.

M., three minute class, purse $100; 2.30 P. M., 2.36 class, purse $100. Thursday, Sept. 22, 10 A. M., oxen to the drag; 2 P. M., 2.40 class, purse $100; 2.20 P. M., free-for-all horses, purse $200; $100 to the first, $50 to second, $30 to third, $20 to fourth. The sum of $800 will be distributed in premiums and purses. New horse sheds have been built and the grounds improved. A good band will furnish music each day, and excellent dinners will be provided under the direction of the society.

A six-year-old son of Ferdinand Briard, of Saccarappa, was run over by a stone-laden jigger, Saturday, and fatally injured. The lad jumped upon the moving team, though urged by the driver to desist, and losing his foothold he fell beneath the rear wheel and was terribly crushed. The wheel passed across his shoulders and chest, causing death in half an hour. No blame is attached to the driver of the team.

On Saturday evening last, Capt. E. L. Parsons, of Portland, the popular officer of the Enith, was called to the pilot house, and in a few well chosen words was presented by his friends with an elegant gold watch chain with an I. O. O. F. charm attached. The procuring of the testimonial had been conducted with perfect quiet, and a more surprised person is seldom ever met with than was Capt. Parsons.

Dr. John Buzzell, of Portland, has sold Highland Park, Fryeburg, to Mrs. George F. Shepley, of Portland, who will make it a private summer resort. Dr. and Mrs. Buzzell contemplate a trip to California.

During the absence of the family of Mr. Giles O. Bailey, editor of the Sunday Times, from their house in Portland, Saturday night, a thief entered the second story window and stole a quantity of jewelry belonging to a young lady boarder.

C. P. Mattocks' corn canning establishment, at East Baldwin, took fire, Friday, but it was discovered in season to prevent the loss of the building.

It is reported that a Portland man, in attendance upon the State Fair, at Lewiston, was robbed at his hotel of $300 in bills, a gold watch and chain and a diamond ring.

A brass foundry is soon to be opened in one part of the building occupied by Hart's wool factory at the West End, Portland. The enterprise is to be run by Mr. Dudley Homer.

Mr. Isaiah Lord, a stable keeper in Portland, loaned a horse and buggy to a man the early part of the week and neither man nor team have been seen since. The man was of middle height, dressed in a blue suit. The team was a Corning buggy; the horse was about fifteen hands high and weighed about 1,100 pounds.

Hancock.

An explosion took place on Goss & Small's quarry, Deer Isle, recently. Courtney Small was thrown fifteen feet into the air, but escaped without fatal injuries. Joseph Small was thrown farther, and was also badly bruised. Pieces of steel and stone entered the flesh of his leg to the bone in three places, and his hand was badly cut.

Kennebec.

On Thursday evening last, says the Kennebec Democrat, several of our business men met at the Elmwood parlors, Waterville, at the solicitation of Mr. Ross, the agent of the Electric Light Co., to listen to a proposition which he would make to them to buy out the Electric plant in this place. Mr. Ross says that he has now one hundred and twenty lights in town, that he wishes to increase them to one hundred and fifty and sell the plant for $30,000. He says this price includes a new dynamo, which the company intend to put in. There is a company that desires to buy the plant with the intention of putting up a five story block for manufacturing purposes.

Dr. N. R. Boutelle, of Waterville, visited the New England Fair at Worcester, Mass., last week, with some of his Southdown sheep. His flock of twenty-eight took seven first prizes in their classes.

Fire was placed under the steam boilers at the State House, Saturday, for the first time this season.

Some beautiful strawberry plants from the Insane Asylum were carried to the Express office, Sunday. One of the plants was still in blossom.

An Augusta citizen tells of one of his relatives who purchased a scrubby lot of "burnt" land on the west side of Mt. Desert Island, at $1 per acre, selling it for $15 an acre, and clearing $600 on the fifty acres.

Mr. Howard Hannaford, son of Mr. Aaron Hannaford, of Readfield, was selling trees in Farmington, when he slipped in going down some steps, fell, and soon after was attacked with brain fever, his head having been injured by the fall. He lingered for three or four weeks, and died the 6th inst. He was a brother of Eli Hannaford, of Readfield, and a graduate of the commercial department, of Kent's High School.

The erection of a building at the east end of the dam by the Edwards Company for the accommodation of small manufacturers, which is proposed, will still further add to the importance of our manufacturing interests, says the Augusta Journal. There is no denying it, our small industries should be cared for as well as the big ones, and a commodious building at the east end of the dam with an abundance of power will give all our manufacturers a chance.

Nannie and Hattie Divine, daughters of J. E. Divine, Esq., of Augusta, may well be proud of the dapper little steed that takes them about over the country so handily. Recently they drove through from Ocean Point to Augusta with their tiny steed in eight hours, a distance of forty-eight miles, and the next morning when liberated in the yard, the pony kicked up his heels and played all manner of pranks. This is a bright record for a 475 pound horse.

Knox.

The Rockland Opinion says: The owners of the schooner Parker M. Hooper, which foundered at sea, have been paid the insurance on her in full. It will be remembered that the mate of the vessel, a Baltimore man, charged Capt. Harkness with scuttling her. It appears that the insurance companies investigated the facts of the case thoroughly, and found no foundation whatever for the charge made.

Sagadahoc.

The tug Marion, of Bath, Capt. McIntosh, of Auburn, which is owned by J. D. Robinson, of Bath, sunk at Union wharf, early Sunday morning. The boat is employed in towing rafts and came to Bath, Saturday, with a raft for the Shaw mill. The crew had everything in readiness for Monday morning, had coaled up and the cook had laid in a store of provisions. Fortunately all the crew was away. The man who was left on board went home on the Pullman. He lived up river. The mate and two of the crew live at Parker's Head. A team was sent there by Mr. Robinson to inquire if anybody was aboard. To the relief of all it was found that all the crew were safe. Capt. McIntosh drove from Auburn and arrived in Bath about two o'clock. He was very anxious as he had left two of the crew aboard. The boat is lying in about twenty feet of water. The smoke stack and corner of the pilot house are out of water at low tide. When she sank she keeled over to the east, her hawsers preventing her from going over. When the boat was left all the doors were locked. The fireroom door is open and the scuttle of the forecastle has been torn off. Most of the ropes were saved. All the crew's clothes were aboard. The ice chest full of provisions is lost. It is thought the boat sunk about four o'clock, as the watchman on the next wharf (Goss Iron Works) heard a loud splash at that time. It is supposed the boat sprung aleak. Efforts will be made to raise the boat.

York.

The strip of land at Old Orchard lying between the electric light station and the railroad depot is being converted into a park and promenade. The project for the erection of an iron pier is being discussed again, and, it is said, with good prospects of success. The structure as now proposed, is to be made entirely of iron. It is to be 1,500 feet long by 25 feet wide, with a large pavillion at the extreme end 75x50 feet. It will be lighted in the evening by numerous electric lights and a band of music will be in attendance during certain hours of the day and night. A row of bath houses and a well-supplied boat house will be included in the establishment.

Workmen, laying the pipe for the new water system at Old Orchard, one morning last week, dug up a gravestone which was imbedded in the earth about six feet, and bore the inscription, Mr. John Means, died March 16, 1776. Upon investigation, it is found that Mr. Means met his death at the hands of Indians.

State at Large.

The trustees having closed the immediate and pressing business of the State Fair, returned home, Saturday, for a few days' attendance on their own private business, and will meet in session at the DeWitt House, Lewiston, next Thursday, 15 inst., to examine and settle bills and close up the business of the Fair.

Among the special premiums at the State Fair was one by Trustee George E. Brackett, Belfast, for the largest and best exhibit of farm products, including grain, fruit and vegetables, by a boy eighteen years old or under, grown on the farm where he worked. 1st, $7; 2d, $3. Must be at least two competitors, and the exhibit confined to twenty feet in the hall. The first premium was awarded to Thomas Johnson, of Turner, and the second to Albert Robbins, of Winthrop. In paying over these prizes to the young farmers, Mr. Brackett commended their work as exhibited in their specimens, and hoped they would continue to raise good crops and exhibit them. These specials will probably be continued another year.

Forming the Constitution.

THE TASK OF THE CONVENTION OF 1787—A MAINE MAN'S PART IN THE WORK.

The articles of confederation which constituted the basis of the general government of the country, from the time of its adoption in 1778, were found but poorly adapted to the growing commerce, population and business of the several States. After much discussion, a convention of delegates was called to meet at Philadelphia on the 14th day of May, 1787, for the purpose of "revising the federal constitution," pursuant to a resolution of the Congress of the Confederation passed February 21, 1787.

Following is a list of the members chosen by the several States to attend the convention. Those in italics never attended. The convention was organized and proceeded to business on the 25th of May, with George Washington, president:

New Hampshire—John Langdon, Nicholas Gilman, John Pickering, Benjamin West.

Massachusetts—Francis Dana, Elbridge Gerry, Nathaniel Gorham, Rufus King, Caleb Strong.

Connecticut—William S. Johnson, Roger Sherman, Oliver Ellsworth.

New York—Robert Yates, Alexander Hamilton, John Lansing.

New Jersey—William Livingston, David Brearley, William C. Houston, William Patterson, John Neilson, Abraham Clark, Jonathan Dayton.

Pennsylvania—Benjamin Franklin, Thos. Mifflin, Robert Morris, George Clymer, Thomas Fitzsimmons, Jared Ingersoll, James Wilson, Gouverneur Morris.

Delaware—George Read, Gunning Bedford, Jr., John Dickinson, Richard Bassett, Jacob Broom.

Maryland—James McHenry, Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer, Daniel Carroll, John Francis Mercer, Luther Martin.

Thus there were fifty-five delegates in the convention. It continued in session for nearly four months, and it was with the utmost difficulty that the various branches and powers of a general government could be adjusted and embodied in a constitution acceptable to a majority of the convention. When it was finally adopted, there were sixteen members who declined to sign it, although the records of the proceedings show that it was "consented to" by unanimous vote. The certificate appended to the instrument and signed by the president, George Washington, states that it was "by the unanimous consent of the States present," yet but one of the three delegates from New York signed it, but two of the four from Massachusetts, two of the four from Georgia and three of the seven from Virginia.

It therefore went to the people for ratification with the consent if not the endorsement of all the members. This action was in the interest of harmony, the minority who were opposed to much that the instrument contained, waiving their objections that the document might go to the people with the prestige of the unanimous consent of this very able body of men. And the result showed the wise forethought of this unanimity, for it was very powerfully opposed in nearly all the States. It was adopted by the convention on the 17th of September, 1787, and on the 4th of March, 1789, it went into operation, two-thirds of the thirteen States having formally accepted it through conventions called for that purpose.

While Washington signed the Constitution, he did not take part in the controversy, nor did he attempt to influence any State legislature as to its acceptance. He thought it not consistent with the position of presiding officer to influence in any degree the work of the convention.

The authorship of the Constitution cannot be attributed to any one person. It was the joint production of many; altered and amended in a multitude of particulars through that busy four months' session of active and conscientious statesmen. But for its style and final arrangement the document is indebted to the pen of Gouverneur Morris probably. The member of the convention from the Maine district of Massachusetts was Rufus King, of Scarborough, the youngest member, and one of the most energetic as the record of the debates show. He was on the committee of five to make the final draft of the Constitution.

Short Cuts.

Diamonds were first set and polished at Bruges in 1450.

Joy Wo is the contradictory name of a San Francisco Chinaman.

By a new process a thousand shades of color can be printed at once.

Stone bullets were used in 1514; those of iron are first mentioned in 1550.

Mrs. J. McMullen, of Saugerties, N. Y., is 103 years of age, but can still cook an extremely eatable dinner.

Gen. Greely, Chief of the Signal Service, has gone to Europe for two months. Now is the time for Wiggins to get in his fine cyclonic work.

A Coroner's jury in Preston, Conn., found that Nathaniel Eldredge "came to his death from heart disease, precipitated by his being choked."

General Sheridan's summer on the Massachusetts shore has given him a new lease of life. He looks younger and happier than he has for some years past.

The wearing of false hair was introduced into England from France in 1572. The practice was introduced into the latter country from Italy, where it originated.

A man named Mutchmore recently got the better of a "bunco steerer" in Cleveland, O. The latter is now remarking sorrowfully that he couldn't "do Muchmore."

The slide trombone, the most perfect of brass musical instruments, is the sackbut of the ancients, and was revived about 1790, after a model found among the ruins of Pompeii.

The Thakore Sahib of Morvi has available pocket money to the amount of $500,000 a year. He can afford to take back to India with him a fall bonnet for each of his wives.

A convict says he was sent to prison for being dishonest, and yet he is compelled to cut out pieces of pasteboard, which are put between the soles of the cheap shoes made there, and passed off on the innocent public as leather.

The famous Dismal Swamp is no longer used as a shelter for runaway negro slaves, of course, but it is believed to be the hiding-place of at least 100 white men who, for various reasons, want to retire to private life for a spell.

The Rev. Eugene P. Mahoney, pastor of the Church of the Lady of Good Counsel, of Madison street, Brooklyn, has, after long-continued efforts, obtained from Rome the celebrated painting bearing the same name as his church.

William T. Stansbury has been a compositor on the Baltimore Sun for fifty years. In spite of his age his eyes are as strong as ever, and he sets up nightly the financial column of the paper in agate, the smallest type used on the paper.

Miss Mabel Trupp, of Ovid, N. Y., was much surprised the other day, as she was breaking eggs with which to make cake, when from one of them popped a lively little serpent six inches long, and as large as a good-sized knitting-needle.

Paper made of cotton was in use in the Eleventh Century; made of linen, in 1319; and its manufacture was first introduced into England in 1588. The use of straw in paper manufacture dates back to the opening year of the present century.

Secretary Endicott is very fond of having his picture taken. A photographer says that Mr. Endicott is one of the best customers among public men that he has ever known. Mr. Endicott, it is said, orders a dozen or more pictures every two or three weeks.

One of the most remarkable features connected with Robert Louis Stevenson's stories is that the basis of a number of them were suggested by dreams. The origin of that remarkable tale, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," Stevenson found in sleep, after eating a Welsh rarebit, it is presumed.

Walter Pierce of Gloversville, N. Y., a boy of 17, smoked fifteen cigarettes after breakfast the other day and then lay down on a sofa. At dinner time he was found perfectly unconscious, and it took a doctor several hours to restore him. He will recover this time, and vows that he will have nothing more to do with cigarettes.

A traveler in Holland noticed two heavy brass handles pending from a high chimney board in a country house. "What are they for?" he asked, and the Hollander explained: "Why, for old gentlemen to hold by when lifting up one foot to warm their toes. Our ancestors were heavy and could not stand long on one leg without support."

A plant has been discovered in India which is said to destroy the power of tasting sugar. It will be useful in counteracting a morbid appetite for sweetmeats, which is an active promoter of indigestion. Another plant found in Madras destroys the relish for cigars and tobacco. Thus two important curatives are added to the materia medica.

Gov. Beaver, of Pennsylvania, has a double. He is a young man of Oil City, and at Franklin, Penn., a few nights ago a band serenaded him thinking he was the Governor. The Oil City youth stepped out on the balcony, placed his hand on his breast and made a dignified bow. Gov. Beaver was in Franklin at the time, and when he heard of the occurrence was much amused.

In Sydney, Australia, roughs of the street are called "larrikins." The name came from the reply of a policeman who was asked by the court what there was against the prisoner whom he had arrested. "Just larrikin' about the shtrates, yer honor," was the reply of the officer, who was an Irishman. From that time disorderly conduct was termed larriking, and the rough was called a larrikin.

A real estate scheme proposes a grand avenue to run from the Virginia shore, opposite Washington, to the tomb of Washington at Mt. Vernon. At present, the grounds are practically inaccessible by land approach, so that all visiting is done by a steamboat service, which enjoys a very profitable monopoly. A straight, fine avenue leading to Mt. Vernon from Washington, would make a new attraction for the capital.

An amateur photographer has rough manilla albums, each one devoted to one of his children. The first page shows the baby a day old, and not a month passes without a picture of that child or some of its surroundings—the nursery, the house, its books and playthings. On some pages are family groups, in which the child figures. Beneath each picture is written the date, and the album will constitute a curious record for the future.

All business letters should be addressed to Boutelle & Burr and communications intended for publication should be addressed "Editor of Whig and Courier

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1887.

The Boston Herald is very anxious to have Mr Randall fired out of the Democratic party, but the party is not so anxious to trade Mr Randall for the Herald

Assistant Secretary Porter has returned to his home in Tennessee having been unable to agree with Secretary Bayard's policy in the State Department, especially as regards the fishery question

Governor Larrabee, of Iowa, enlisted twice but was rejected each time on account of a loss of sight in one eye, but that does not prevent the Democrats from accusing him of lack of devotion to his country

Speaking of the New York Republican Convention the World says "The watch word will be harmony, the objective point 1888 The first was attained and the latter is sure to follow Four years of humbug is all the people can stand

The Albany correspondent of the Boston Herald writes "Ex-Senator Thomas C Platt and Senator Frank Hiscock, as delegates at large in favor of Blaine, will head the delegation of New York State to the next Republican National Convention, if Platt Hiscock and Blaine are alive in 1888 The Republican State Convention, which meets at Saratoga Wednesday, will serve to strengthen this prediction

Democratic managers still turn to forgery The latest effort in that line was a letter purporting to have been written by John McMackin, Henry George's lieutenant, declaring that the purpose of the George party is to defeat Mr Cleveland next year Mr McMackin has denounced the forgery, and the paper which published it admits that the writing is unlike the specimens presented as his

Gov Foraker opened the Republican campaign in Ohio Saturday night His speech was a ringing denunciation of the incompetency and corruption of the Democratic party in that State and fully vindicated the judgment of Candidate Powers when he wisely declined to participate in a joint debate It was an aggressive speech from beginning to end and shows that the Republicans propose to make the campaign a hot one

"They must have my help in organizing the House and I will trust them to take any step they see fit toward formulating a plan for tariff reduction without consulting me" is the somewhat ominous statement attributed to Mr Randall by a Pennsylvania friend a few days ago, and it looks as though the ex-Speaker had sounded well the ground beneath his feet and found it firm While in Washington, and before the conferences at at Oak View were finished Mr Randall said that he could accept no compromise, and looked forward to no retreat in the coming Congress from the position he has held in the past

The President is certain of renomination unless he permits himself to become entrapped by the schemes of Carlisle and Watterson to procure his indorsement of a tariff bill which cannot pass Congress nor be indorsed by the party conventions —Irmingt in Age.

As President Cleveland gave his unqualified indorsement to the free trade schemes in the last Congress he stands to day thoroughly committed to that faction of the party Any attempt to prove to the contrary in face of his record will only be a piece of subterfuge to deceive the people If the Age believes in the benefits of protection as it evidently does, the sooner it ceases to worship false gods the better it will be for the advancement of the protection system so essential to the future development of the resources of the South

The mistake President Cleveland has made has been in yielding too much to partisan pressure It is a pressure that has grown by the amount of concession made to it It has been carried too far It has passed the borders of equalization and has taken on too much the character of that proscription which it should have avoided —Boston Herald

But does the Herald discover any indications that the President proposes to profit by the mistakes he has made? A man actuated by sincere purposes is liable to mistakes, but he is always ready to correct them Mr Cleveland, however, keeps the machine going at full speed and retains Senator Gorman at the helm The Herald is prolific in its condemnation of effects but prudently refrains from any serious criticism of the cause of the condition of things it pretends to deplore

President Cleveland owes it to his party and to himself to find a common ground on which all Democratic voters can stand and work together for the settlement of this tariff question He alone stands in a position to heal the differences that now exist between the party's leaders on this all important issue It is by far the heaviest and gravest responsibility which his position as the head of the party, its guide and leader has yet imposed upon him —Boston Globe

The President will find it even more difficult to harness the free trade and protection steeds of his party than he did to drive the old spoils hack and the reform nag at one and the same time What ground is there upon which Mr. Carlisle, the free trader, and Mr Randall, the protectionist, can come together with any semblance of honesty on the tariff question? A platform so adjusted to enable both of these gentlemen to climb upon it must of necessity be dishonest just as it was in 1884

The Washington Post says that the President has examined the tariff situation carefully and there will be no lack of back bone in his policy The same remark exactly was made of his purpose to sternly adhere to his reform pledges For weeks and months the people had it dinned into their ears that we now had a President with a back bone and that hereafter we were to see the civil service absolutely divorced from politics. No qualified expressions were used in proclaiming his purposes; it was to be a complete revolution A little more than half the Presidential term has now expired, however, and the chief sponsor for the civil service reform policy of Mr. Cleveland plaintively admits that it has no existence; that there has been a complete partisan reconstruction of the civil service and after witnessing the fearful downfall of the Mugwump hopes mournfully remarks that this is a good time for the so-called reformers to do a little thinking. We should say so, but in the meantime let us have a rest on the stiff back theory as the President's spinal cord will be as yielding to party necessities on the tariff matter as it has been in a distribution of the spoils.

In a recent interview on the Administration Col Watterson was rather guarded in his criticisms of President Cleveland, but in a latter conversation the same gentleman permitted his feelings to overcome policy and he said, Mr Cleveland has gone to the extreme of disobliging his friends. If a friend recommends anything Mr Cleveland immediately does the contrary in order to be able to say that he has only been influenced by the strict sense of official duty. "The worst of it," said the Colonel the other day, "is that we have a President who is neither fish nor flesh. When men like myself go to the White House, expecting to meet a good fellow, we don't meet anything of the kind When men go to the White House expecting to meet a gentleman they are equally disappointed. Everybody is disappointed. "And yet,' said the Colonel sadly, "we have got to renominate him It is all there is in the cards'

[Utica Morning Herald]

Grover Cleveland is President by the fortuitous concurrence of a series of accidents No one can pretend that he was nominated or elected because of any fitness of character or training In the canvass he was induced to put forth certain assurances relative to reform in the civil service and in administration, which were invented for him to gain votes Subsequently to his election, he repeated these pledges in phrases which cover a great deal of ground. He set himself up as a leader to divorce the civil service from politics, and to raise the standard of the government The tone of all his utterances was pretentious and pharisaical implying when not positively asserting, grave charges against preceding administrations, and proclaiming himself as the ideal reformer

He has utterly failed to substantiate any of these charges, and has fallen from the plane of reform to that of the intriguing and self-seeking politician All the investigations which partisan malignity could prompt, have served only to prove the excellence of the methods and results in the several departments under Republican rule, and Mr Cleveland has found it beyond his ability to reach the high level on which his predecessors stood and acted The Pan-Electric scandal taints not only the Department of Justice, but the entire present administration Peculations and crimes occur with startling frequency where Democratic workers have been thrust into places of consequence Success attends adherence to Republican policy, and abuses and blunders mark every departure from it

In the civil service, the sweep has been in a little over two years as complete as any master of the spoils system could possibly make it Every internal revenue collector, every custom house chief, every foreign minister, every post-office of any moment, with very rare exceptions, have been given, not simply to Democrats but to the personal followers of Mr Cleveland who are willing through thick and thin to advocate his nomination for a second term So gross has been the abuse of the spoils that in some States, like Indiana and Maryland, open revolts have been organized against the President's violation of his pledges In the South everywhere the federal patronage has been marshaled as a personal attachment to Mr Cleveland In New York federal officers are members of the Democratic State Committee, and they boss caucuses and conventions No other President ever used the offices so grossly, so sweepingly, as a partisan and personal machine as has Grover Cleveland

He has given another sign that he feels that his pretensions and his abuses bring upon him not only censure but popular indignation He has held an interview with Ballard Smith of the New York World in which while he complains that that journal has given place to criticisms upon him, and moans pitifully about his "embarrassments and perplexities," he audaciously continues his claim that he is "the person to bring reform about" in the civil service The whole tone is that of a criminal on trial, pleading not guilty, and asseverating that society is in a conspiracy against him The President does not present an attractive spectacle in the character of his own eulogist and there is an old proverb which describes a person who appears as advocate in his own defense

Mr Cleveland must hereafter occupy a defensive position His abandonment of reform in the civil service has been so gross, so palpably for ambitious ends, that excuses and palliations only aggravate his crime His treatment of Union veterans has been so insulting, so abusive, so aggravating, that their wrath and resentment are not only natural but honorable to them Relative to the Indances, the Administration has been kept from disaster simply by carrying out Republican traditions, and apprehension checks business just as indications arise that a new departure would be taken On minor topics the President, both in action and speech, shows himself a dull, stolid man, intense as a partisan, and narrow in all his views

This long interview, so much a plea in palliation of his conduct, is published with his full consent The World's object is transparent, that journal wanted a sensation, mild as this, if it could get none other Why, however, did Mr Cleveland want to appear in print at this time? He must be burdened with the censure visited upon him, but the matter of a renomination is the real explanation of his talk On that subject he is mysterious and magniloquent and if we may believe him, unselfish and almost crushed with a sense of obligation and duty His language contrasts strangely with his own conduct and the acts of those nearest to him He and they are pulling every string to destroy possible rivals, to purchase support by patronage, to control delegates to compass the nomination Everybody sees and understands what he is doing His false pretenses on this matter, are only a repetition of his double dealing and hypocrisy relative to the civil service The day of miracles will return before this creature of accidents can be again elected President

Although appointed they had not received their commissions.

MURAT HALSTEAD INTERVIEWED.

What He Saw Abroad—Mr. Blaine.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13. Murat Halstead, of Cincinnati, who arrived from Europe yesterday, talked interestingly with a reporter last night of his visit abroad. He was most impressed by the fact that Americans are very popular in London; that the Irish cause is unquestionably making progress among the English people; that the growth of democracy is behind the Irish question and that that is more important than the Irish question itself. Of Mr. Blaine, whom he met in Homburg, Mr. Halstead says: Mr. Blaine is not coming back this fall, nor during the coming winter either. I am not able to say whether he will be the next Republican candidate for the Presidency, and the question whether he will seek to be the nominee of the party may depend even more upon his enemies than his friends. Mr. Blaine approved very cordially the action of the Ohio Convention in indorsing Sherman's candidacy, saying he did not see how the convention could have done anything else than the very proper thing they did do.

TIRED OF EXILE.

Returns to his Creditors.

LYNN, Mass., Sept. 13. John S. Mehan arrived in Salem this noon from New York, having walked the entire distance. He offered to give himself up to the authorities, saying that he was tired of being an exile. Since his absence he has been in Canada and lately in New York City. He says his brother, Edward, is in Winnipeg, Manitoba. The Mehan brothers were shoe manufacturers in Lynn and and left about five years ago for Canada leaving many creditors.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

The Railroad Question.

CONCORD, Sept. 13. In the House this forenoon the petition of John W. Morse and 191 other citizens of Bradford in favor of the passage of the Hazen bill was received and tabled.

The debate on the railroad question was resumed. Mr. Sawyer, of Manchester, spoke in favor of the Hazen bill. He said that in what he might say he would represent the sentiment of the people of his city, something the gentleman who had preceded him (Mr. Tilloway) had not done. As a member of the Legislature in 1883 he had voted for the Colby bill with some misgivings but since that time he had not been chided for his actions. Manchester had great interests at stake in the controversy, and her business men had considered it well and knew what they wanted. He had consulted many business men in his city and five sevenths were in favor of the Hazen bill, while the remainder were divided for the Atherton bill and no legislation. He took no stock in the howl that had been raised against foreign corporations. Foreign corporations had made Manchester what it is, and if the railroads had kept faith with them the city would be one-third larger than it now is.

GREAT FLOODS.

Damage to Railroad Property.

TUCSON, Arizona, Sept. 13. The destruction by floods on the Southern Pacific is much greater than at first supposed. For three hundred and fifty miles there are numberless washouts, and there has been no trains from the East or West since the night of September 8th. One thousand men are at work and it will require three weeks to repair the damage between Tucson and Benson. The floods are the greatest ever know in Arizona. Five miles of track and four bridges on the Sonora railroad are destroyed.

FIFTY LIVES LOST

From the French Fleet.

HALIFAX, Sept. 13. St. Pierre Miquelon advices state that disasters during the great gale are still reported daily. The schooner St. Pierre passed bottom up and the crew of sixteen men are all lost. The vessels heard from to the present time belonging to the French cod fishing fleet report a loss of fifty lives. One hundred vessels are demoralized and withdrawn from the fisheries, thus losing the September fishing. This will decrease the season's catch 20,000 quintals and in consequence prices have already advanced 15 per cent.

TERRIBLE WEATHER.

Thrilling Experiences off the Banks—Vessels Tossed About with a Loss of Life Beyond Computation.

HALIFAX Sept. 12. Captain Jamieson, of the schooner Geraldine, which arrived at Canso yesterday, tells a thrilling story of his experience of the great storm which swept the fishing banks on the 3rd inst.

On Sunday he spoke the Provincetown schooner Carrie C. Mills, which had parted her cable and was leaking badly. He passed the Boston schooner Nellie Woodbury, which reported that her mate was among her six men drowned. At the same time seven American vessels were in sight with flags at half mast for loss of members of their crews. He also passed a number of dories bottom up.

Captain Jamieson has had 20 years experience on the fishing banks, but never before experienced such wild winds and furious seas as those which prevailed on the 3d instant. He is positive, from the suddeness and fury of the storm, that the loss of life yet to be reported will be frightful. The 3d day of September, says Captain Jamieson, commenced with a light breeze from the east-southeast. The early morning gave no sign of the approaching cyclone. At 6 o'clock the dories left the Gerald ne for fishing. Two hours later the barometer read, "Look out for squalls." He then fired signal guns calling his men aboard. All but one man reached the vessel in safety, but only just in the nick of time. Nicholas Ash, the man who was lost, must have missed the vessel till he passed to the leeward, when it was impossible for him to get to windward, and his dory would soon be tossed bottom up in the terrible sea that arose in the gale. Indeed, it soon became doubtful if the schooner could outlive the hurricane, much less the eggshell of a dory.

At noon the Geraldine was swept by every sea, tearing out her house pipe, ripping up her windlass, carrying away jib and sweeping decks of oil barrels and water casks and 20 barrels of clam bait. At 10.30 the wind hauled north-northwest and increased in violence. Captain Jamieson took in the storm sail to save it. At 4 o'clock he saw a large schooner adrift and rushing with fearful speed right down on the Geraldine. No attempt was being made on board the rapidly approaching vessel to pass clear of us. They blew fog horns and fired guns to warn us of their utter helplessness and of the doom of both vessels in case of a collision. Captain Jamieson cut the Geraldine's cable and let her drive. As she leaped from her parted cable and payed off a sea broke over her, taking the remaining 16 dories off the house, lifting them up half-mast high, breaking the davitt plank, wrenching off both davitts with gear attached and making a clean sweep of everything. At 8 o'clock a very thick fog shut down and we close reefed the foresail, to have her under command in case we came suddenly near another vessel, a large fleet being adrift all around us. The sail was scarcely set when it was torn in shreds. From thence the gale abated, and at midnight there was a dead calm. Mail advices from Newfoundland say that seven of the fourteen men missing from schooner Maria were rescued, and have rejoined the vessel.

Among other disasters reported from the great gale of the 29th ult. are the following: Schooner P. L. Whitten reports that she spoke a Gloucester vessel that reported a vessel of 50 tons bottom up. It was supposed that she had either been run down or burned. The W. F. McCoy lost one dory, part of cable and all trawl gear. The schooner Grenada, Captain R. Romkey, reports that on the 27th of August, in lat. 40°, long. 49°39′, passed a vessel of 100 tons bottom up. The bottom of the vessel was copper painted. The schooner Polly Dicks, Capt. May, lost two men, Philip Dicks and Philip May, who were swamped in a dory. The captain reports a French banker losing seven men. The schooner C. W. Harris reports that on the 29th ult. she passed the French schooner Cordelia with both masts gone to the deck. She was lying on her beam ends and not a soul was to be seen on deck. She also saw a French bark whose decks had been completely swept. Captain Roland, of the Souris light, reports that in lat. 46°30′ long. 49°35′, he sighted a large ship bottom up. He pulled alongside and found her to be a timber laden vessel of about 400 tons. He could not make her name. She was smashed up a good deal, and the captain is of the opinion that she collided with another ship. There was any amount of lumber floating around and the vessel itself was in a position dangerous to navigation.

A BASE BALL SENSATION.

The St. Louis Browns Refuse to Play with a Colored Club.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 12. The Times this morning says: For the first time in the history of base ball the color line has been drawn, and that by the "world's champions," the St. Louis Browns, who have established the precedent that white players must not play with colored men. The Browns were in open revolt Saturday night. Some time ago President Von der Ahe arranged for his club to play an exhibition game at West Farms, near New York, with the Cuban Giants, the noted colored club. He was promised a big guarantee and it was expected that fully 15,000 persons would be present. The game was to have been played yesterday, and President Von der Ahe had purchased railroad tickets for all his players and made all the arrangements for the trip. While he was at supper at the Continental Hotel Saturday night he was approached by O'Neil, the left fielder, who laid a letter on the table and then hastily slipped out of the room. The letter read as follows:

> "PHILADELPHIA, PA., Sept. 10.
> To Chris Von der Ahe, Esq.:
>
> Dear Sir—We, the undersigned members of the St. Louis Base Ball Club, do not agree to play against negroes to-morrow. We will cheerfully play against white people at any time, and think, by refusing to play, we are only doing what is right, taking everything into consideration and the shape the team is in at present.

Chris Von der Ahe hastily left the table and went down stairs, where he found the players talking in a group. When he asked the meaning of the letter nobody answered him. Receiving no reply, President Von der Ahe said quietly, "As it seems to be a matter of principle with you, you need not play to-morrow." The Cuban giants have played games with the Chicago, Indianapolis, Detroit, Louisville, Athletic and other prominent clubs, and this is the first time that any club has refused to play with them on account of their color.

FOREIGN NEWS.

The Irish Question.

Speech by Parnell.

LONDON, Sep. 13. In Commons to-night, Mr. Smith, Chancellor of Exchequer, said if the Dublin Weekly News carried out its threat to publish accounts of the meetings of the suppressed branches of the League, the Government would vindicate the law.

John Morley said in no foreign country were political offences subjected to the harsh discipline applied to political prisoners in Ireland.

Labouchere denounced the police account of the Mitchellstown affray as a gross, impudent tissue of lies, characterized the men who issued the account as liars and murderers and demanded an impartial inquiry into the outrages.

Parnell said nothing reflected more discredit on the government than the present treatment of political prisoners. The late Mr. Forster treated prisoners with distinguished humanity but now the government tried to strike terror into the hearts of the opponents by treating political prisoners like criminals of the basest type. No government reporters were ever molested at any of the thousands of meetings held by the Irish National League in Ireland. The meeting at Mitchellstown was equally open to reporters.

The police acted like cowards. They were part of the system which has caused terror within the prison and murder outside. Instead of conceding to Ireland the right to manage her own affairs the Government has taken her by the throat and was trying to strangle her. In conclusion Parnell wished Balfour well outside his job. (Irish cheers.) "My only fear is," added the Irish leader, "lest some men become so exasperated as to commit wild acts in revenge. I will continue, however, to urge my countrymen to patient endurance of wrong and suffering until we get home rule." (Cheers.)

The appropriation bill passed to a third reading and the House adjourned until Friday, when Parliament will be prorogued.

Morse, one of our highly respected citizens, with his daughter, Miss Nellie, Jerome Spencer and Eben Rowell and wife, left Tuesday morning for Montana. A STRONG IMAGINATION. A fellow named John Hersion came up to Officer Dougherty the other day and told him that he had been robbed of $50 in a saloon on Front street, and wished that officer to go and arrest the parties and recover his money. The officer went with him to the place indicated and, after questioning and hearing the story of those pointed out as the robbers suspected the accusing party was not telling a straight story, so thought he would search him. After a careful search, the $50 of which he said he had been robbed was found upon him underneath his shirt, and his little game did not work. He was up in the Municipal Court yesterday and fined $5 and costs for drunkeness.

NEW STEAMER. The new steamer Bluehill which has just been built in East Boston by McKay for the Bluehill & Ellsworth Steamboat Company will leave East Boston next Friday and will be given a trial trip. She is 140 feet in length and 18 feet beam, being finely fitted up for a passenger boat. Her saloon is handsomely furnished and comfortable. She will leave Rockland on the arrival of the Boston steamer every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday touching at North West Harbor, Bluehill, Little Deer Isle, Pretty Marsh, Sedgwick, Surry, Brookline and Ellsworth. The steamer will take the place of the steamer Henry Morrison which has become too old for this service. She will probably go on the route next week, and will undoubtedly prove an excellent passenger steamer.

REPAIRING THE DAMS. A crew of twenty-five men in charge of Mr. Jasper Johnson, of this city, has been sent up to Chesuncook Lake to make repairs on the dam which was partly carried away in the spring. About a quarter part of the dam was carried away and this will have to be rebuilt. The rest of the dam will probably need some propping and slight repairs. It will take about three weeks to complete the work, which will be done as substantially as possible. After the crew finishes at the Chesuncook dam it will proceed to the Lower lakes to repair the North Twin dam, where a number of gates and the top of the dam were carried away. The whole job will be quite an extensive one and it will take about all of the fall to put both places in good condition for next season's driving.

A BIG VESSEL. Capt. J. M. Phillips, of Taunton, Mass., was at the Bangor House last night and goes to Camden this morning. Capt. Phillips is one of the principal owners of the four masted schooner King Philip and is having another four master built at Camden, which will be launched about Oct. 25. The dimensions of the new schooner are: 210 feet keel, 46 feet beam, 20 feet hold, 240 feet over all and she will draw 18 feet of water when loaded. The vessel is built to carry coal, her capacity being 2,300 tons, about 400 tons more than the King Philip. The new vessel will be 20 feet longer and 3½ feet wider, which will give some idea of her size. The Captain thinks there is no place like Maine for ship building and scenery and has built a cottage at Camden which he will occupy next season.

PARKER & PEAKES NEW FACTORY. The new factory of Parker & Peakes on the corner of Oak and Hancock streets is almost completed, and all that remains to be done are a small amount of painting, and some slight finishing inside. The work will be finished by the last of this week, and then on the first of next week, the firm will begin to move from the factory on Exchange street. The moving will depend on whether or not the piping and belting for the engine are in place, that the elevator may be in running order, and it will take about three weeks to get settled in the new place of business. The cutting for the present sale of goods was finished yesterday, and the next will be done in the other building. The new factory presents a handsome appearance, being of good proportions and neatly painted, while the two cupolas add greatly to the looks of the exterior. It is four stories in height, besides a high basement, and looms up from the other buildings in the vicinity when viewed from a commanding position. The basement of the factory will be devoted to the sole leather department, the first floor to finishing and packing, the second to bottoming, the third to stitching and fitting, and the fourth to the cutting of uppers. About two hundred and fifty persons will be employed at the beginning of operations, but the number will probably be increased as the business becomes heavier. The firm now has excellent facilities for business, not being cramped as in the former place, and will undoubtedly do a large amount of work in the new factory, which is well adapted to the purpose for which it is intended.

THE MAINE MILITIA

To Attend the Philadelphia Centennial—Their Departure Yesterday.

A number of the companies of the Maine Militia, which are to represent Maine at the Philadelphia Centennial, left this city yesterday on their way to Philadelphia. The Frontier Guards, of Eastport, arrived in this city about one o'clock yesterday afternoon and, making but a few minutes stop, continued on their way on the Flying Yankee to Portland, where they meet the other troops. They were met here by Lieut. H. N. Paine, who is to command the detail. The detail from the Hamlin Guards assembled at their Armory early in the afternoon, and soon afterwards marched to Maplewood Park where they were put through the manual of arms and a short drill by Major W. F. Harding. The drill was a successful one and the men showed marked improvement in company movements.

Last evening the Hamlin Guards and the Crosby Guards which had come up from Hampden in the afternoon, assembled at the armory, and shortly before eight o'clock, marched to the Maine Central depot to take the train west. The Hamlin Guards are commanded by Lieutenant J. H. Wharff, Capt. F. S. Palmer being unable to go. The new uniforms are very handsome, being almost exactly like those of the regular army, and the companies made a very soldierly appearance as they marched through the streets. The former company went to Lewiston where they join the Nealley Rifles detachment. The Crosby Guards were joined at Newport by the Dover and Dexter companies, and stopped over night at Waterville. They take the early morning train for Portland. All of the Maine troops will assemble at 9 o'clock this forenoon on the Western Promenade at Portland, and be given a battallion drill.

The detail will be in command of Col. Victor Brett, and the other officers from this city are as follows: Major C. S. Lunt, Assistant Adjutant General; Lieutenant L. S. Chilcott, Adjutant Second Regiment; Lieutenant J. F. Kelleher, Quartermaster, and Lieutenant D. A. Robinson, Assistant Surgeon.

Governor Bodwell will be accompanied by his staff with their ladies and Gen. H. L. Mitchell and lady.

At noon to-day the Maine Militia will leave Portland for Philadelphia by way of Worcester, Providence and by steamer to New York, thence to Philadelphia on Thursday. The troops will break camp on Saturday, the 24th, for home and arriving in Portland on Sunday will be sent on their way from there by special train.

AMUSEMENTS.

M'lle Rhea at the Opera House.

One of the most thoroughly delightful entertainments that has been given in the Opera House for a long time was the presentation of "Pygmalion and Galatea" last evening by M'lle Rhea and her strong supporting company. For some unaccountable reason the attendance was small and regrets were expressed on all sides that so many of our citizens who always appreciate a good performance were to be the losers in missing this rich treat. Of the comedy itself nothing need be said as it is already familiar to our readers. M'lle Rhea's conception of the trying role of "Galatea" was charming in every detail. The slight accent always noticeable in speaking her lines only added to the fascination of her acting, which, in its intensity of feeling as well as the sweet simplicity of one suddenly called into life in a world, the customs of which were of necessity new and strange to her, so completely captivated the audience that the curtain was rung up several times in answer to the applause. The recitation of the soliloquy of "Charlotte Corday," at the close, was given with so much expression that the audience seemed to understand every word although spoken in French. M'lle Rhea has surrounded herself with a superb supporting company. The "Pygmalion" of Mr. Bell was a strong piece of acting, while the "Cynisca" of Miss Allen left absolutely nothing to be desired. Mr. Amory as "Chrysos" and Mrs. Wren as "Chrysos'" wife were both excellent in their parts, and the others were all good.

To-night the same company will present "Fairy Fingers" and the house should be filled.

New Orleans Minstrels.

Gorton's Original New Orleans Minstrels, one of the oldest organizations on the road, are announced to appear at the Opera House next Saturday night. The Baltimore News said:

At Masonic Temple Gorton's Original New Orleans Minstrels appeared to packed house last night. The organization contains among its members some of the best minstrel talent in the country. The songs, sketches and specialty acts are admirably given, and the jokes possess the merit of a considerable degree of freshness. The minstrels will continue as the attraction through the week.

Notes.

Next week will be a merry one at the Opera House. On Monday and Tuesday evenings Edwin and Sanger's Original Sparks Company will present their most successful comedy, "A Bunch of Keys." This is considered by many as Chas. H. Hoyt's best piece. It has certainly made a fortune for Messrs. Edwin and Sanger.

On Wednesday evening Miss Augusta Van Doren will appear in the leading role in "Charlotte Russe," a satirical comedy on New York society, written by Robert Griffin Morris, author of "The Kindergarten," and other successful plays.

Friday and Saturday evenings Pat Rooney and his comedy company will present "Pat's Wardrobe."

"The Little Tycoon" in New England.

Mr. Willard Spenser, the talented composer of the American opera "The Little Tycoon," was in town this week arranging for the presentation of his work again in this city. After January next he will take entire management of the company, and says that he will make it an excellent one, as no doubt he will, for Mr. Spenser takes much pride in the proper presentation of his opera. Speaking of his plans, he said that he should carry the "Tycoon" into the New England circuit soon, as there had been a great call for the production. The opera has been a phenominal success, especially in Philadelphia, where the people seem never to weary of it. Mr. Spenser is a young man thoroughly in love with his occupation, a self-taught musician, but wonderfully good at composing pleasing melodies. He is at work on a new opera, but has not yet reached a point where it would be advisable to describe it at length.—Boston Journal.

Agricultural and Household Matters.

Vacation is Over.

Nut brown lads and rosy lasses,
Faces brimming full of glee
Who such fun and pleasure has, as
Boys and girls from study free?

Stop a minute, little master,
Tell me where is summer gone?
Aye, the hours have sped much faster,
Than the minutes should have flown

What with balls and boats and fishing
Climbing trees or races run
Every pleasure worth the wishing
Has been mine from sun to sun

Tell me, little blue eyed maiden,
Has your pleasure been the same?
Sports that so much please your brother
You would hardly care to name

I have had my fill of pleasure
With my books and games and toys,
For enjoyment without measure
Is for girls as well as boys

Merry lads and laughing maidens
Quickly pass the summer days
Autumn brings return of study,
Bids you leave your sports and plays

Yes the summer days are ended,
Playing time is nearly past,
Yet their bright and sunny memories
Leave a pleasure that will last

Turn we now to school and lessons
With an eager, quickened zest
Though we love these sports and pleasures
Study time is far the best.

They are good each in its season,
Play and study,—work and play
Thus we grow, you see the reason,
Wiser, stronger, every day

Small Savings—Saving Steps.

My reason and apology for writing this paper on a subject which three-fourths of our women ought to know, is found in the two following conversations with two friends not long ago. To one, in speaking of my new range, I said, "The ideal cooking stove isn't made yet. The oven ought to be higher to save one the necessity of stooping to look into it and some part of the top ought to be higher, so as to fry and cook small dishes without standing bent with scorched face and aching back, while there should be a special low place for the washing boiler and the large pots to avoid the unhandiness of reaching higher than one's head while putting clothes on to boil, and also avoid the strain to one's shoulders and arms in taking a heavy pot off so high a place."

She replied, "Well, I might have taken off boiling pots of soup or stretched my arms over my head all my life taking out clothes from a boiler on a high stove, but I should never have thought what made it hard."

I was visiting a friend lately who does her housework alone, and after dinner she said with a sigh, "Now my hardest work is come. I would rather do any work of the day than to clear the table and get ready for dish washing."

So behold my reason and my apology. My one friend doesn't think what the reason can be that makes her work so hard, the other dreads clearing the dinner away because she does not know how to make it as easy for herself as it can be made. To help some tired woman to think in the matter of "saving steps" is my object in telling her how to clear off her dinner table neatly, methodically and quickly.

It is to be hoped that the family of the J. W. aforesaid, have formed a praiseworthy habit of leaving the dining room after dinner, instead of lingering to tell you the rest of that story, to talk over the last bit of gossip, to ask advice about that new dress or to tell you how finely the new horse trotted, etc., all very good items in their place, but that place emphatically not while you are anxious to get the rest of the dinner work done. You, in the mean time, fearing to boldly leave them while you go from pantry to cellar, from kitchen to shed, linger about, putting away a few stray articles, losing the thread of their conversation which you are inwardly wishing would keep until in the quiet of dish washing, if no later, you can hear and answer intelligibly.

First, then, we will suppose you, dear J. W., alone and intent only on how few steps your poor tired feet must take until you can mount your high stool for the dish washing. Before you remove a dish put every chair back against the wall, to give yourself room and not have to reach over them or stumble against them. Now gather up all the dishes that have not been used, a cup and saucer, perhaps, that was put on for Jennie who "didn't care for tea, thank you," a plate, knife and fork for the one whose head was aching so she couldn't come down. Take all these at once and carry to the closet, putting each in its respective place. Then step into the pantry and take, in a large waiter (or the very biggest dripping pan will do in default of a waiter,) the food that was left in the pantry when served. These will probably be the remains of the pudding, an extra piece of pie, a little more milk, etc. Bring them to the dining-room and set the waiter upon the side table while you take from the dining table all the food which goes to the cellar, depositing with the rest which you brought from the pantry in your waiter. Carry it down at once and put every article in its proper place.

Now place upon the side table the napkins, table mats, tea tray, castors, etc., and then begin on the real work—the getting the dishes ready to wash. Begin by taking off all the silver, knives, forks and spoons and laying them in the side of the waiter. Then, commencing with the largest plates, with a thin old steel knife, or what I have found to be a better article, a druggist's spatula or a large sized palette knife kept for the purpose, scrape carefully every particle from them into the largest sized vegetable dish you have used at the table. After piling these plates together, do the same with the dessert plates, saucers, preserve dishes and individual butters, and place them in the water. When you come to the cups, rinse the settlings of tea or coffee with a little hot water into the slop bowl. These all being disposed upon the waiter, are in readiness for the dish pan. Carry the refuse out and dispose of it immediately.

Now if you leave your table set, you have only to change the cloth after having used the crumb brush and put in their places the articles you previously removed to the side table. If you reset your table at each meal, you will have carried those articles to the closet instead of leaving them.

With your broom remove the crumbs from the floor, set the chairs up to the table again, darken the windows, and, shutting up your dining-room, betake yourself to the comfort of washing well sorted, well scraped and well rinsed dishes. —Jessie Nason in Good Housekeeping.

Guernsey Cattle.

A recent article, published by the Live Stock Journal in England, written by Sir John F. Lennard, president of the English Guernsey Cattle Association Society, from which we make a brief extract, states there is nothing of romance around the history of Guernsey cattle. Though their origin is somewhat uncertain, yet they have been so long identified with the island from which they take their name that they are entitled to claim it as their native land. Youatt ranks the Channel Islands cattle with those of Normandy, France. All of these cattle, whether from the continent or the Islands, says Youatt, pass under the common name, Alderneys. Prof. Low says the breeds of the Channel Islands cattle are essentially the same, although that of Guernsey deviates from the common type and presents a greater affinity with the races of Normandy. The old Alderney had a great resemblance to certain breeds of Normandy.

Be the origin what it may, however, it is known that the Alderney cattle have been for well nigh a century reared in purity in the Channel Islands. In Jersey, an act of the legislature was passed in the year 1789, by which the importation into Jersey of any cow, calf or bull was prohibited under heavy penalty. About thirty years later a similar law was passed in Guernsey, and since then the two varieties of the Channel Islands cattle have been maintained separately, each being bred in absolute purity. The contrast between the large and useful Guernsey and the smaller and more elegant Jersey is very striking. Yet the differences have been brought about entirely by selection in breeding and sustained cultivation of peculiar features, so as to suit varying tastes and purposes. While the general features which distinguished the Guernsey cattle of fifty years ago have been faithfully maintained, there would seem to be some increase in size, and also improvement in symmetry or levelness of outline, as well as in flesh, produce of milk, and tendency to fatten.

In appearance the Guernsey is a fine, deep bodied, rich colored cow, of average size, with a gentle and contented expression, and free from nervousness of movement and irritability. Her quality is seen in the marked yellowness of the skin, which will be found to be specially the case on examining the inside of the ear, around the eye, at the base of the horns and at the end of the tail, inclining to orange on the udder, teats and hoofs. A good cow of this breed seems lustrous with the gold that shines at all her points.

The hair is fine and soft, and varies in color from a deep red to a light yellow and white. A rich yellow or orange, fawn and white is the favorite color sought for. Many breeders now aim at getting a whole colored animal, or at any rate one with very little white. This others consider to be a mistake, believing that one of the characteristics of the breed should be a fair proportion of white, especially as this enables the deep yellow of the skin to be better seen. The skin should be soft and fine, handling well. The cow should be possessed of all the characteristics of a milker, viz., long head and neck, deep, wedge shaped shoulders, long and prominent milk veins, with a deep bag lying well back and enveloped in soft and silky skin.

The great dominant and distinguishing property of the Guernsey cow is her production of butter. Her milk is characterized by a deep rich color, which imparts to the butter that golden hue so much prized. It is this quality which makes her breed valuable to introduce into a herd for the purpose of improving the color of the butter. The milk of a few Guernseys will very perceptibly tinge the milk of a dairy of other breeds. Guernsey milk is also noted for its high percentage of butter fat. The milk and butter produce from Guernseys of course varies greatly, but as a rule, is exceedingly high in relation to the food consumed.

Sir John Lennard has kept Guernseys since 18[illegible], and believes them well fitted to take a prominent place as dairy cattle. They may be crossed advantageously with other breeds, and thus employed in improving the dairy properties of the general stock of cattle in the country. Guernsey cattle possess beef making properties which might be developed to good purpose. From many of his cows a yield of sixteen to eighteen quarts of milk per day is producing from two to two and three fourths pounds of butter from the daily mess of milk. Mr. Neville Wyatt's cow, Gilt Edge, after second calf gave twenty-two and one half quarts of milk a day and a total of eight hundred and twenty-four gallons in twelve months. Mr. Lennard thinks any cow giving from eighteen to twenty quarts a day of rich milk, and making from two to three pounds of butter, or twenty pounds a week of seven days, is as good as need be. Both the milk and butter from the Guernsey cow are richer than from other breeds. Even in the Channel Islands the Guernsey butter fetches more money per pound than the Jersey butter. His cows are well treated, grass in summer, and a mixture of pulped parsnips, crushed oats, bran, cotton cake, and cut hay twice a day, as their winter food. He is breeding larger animals than he did at the commencement, and finds them equally good if not better than the smaller cows, and worth more when no longer of value for the dairy.

Many nations and sovereigns have had plants and flowers as their emblems. The rose of England became especially famous during the Wars of the Roses, after which the red and white were united, and the rose of both colors is called the York and Lancaster. The thistle is honored as the emblem of Scotland, from the circumstance that once upon a time a party of Danes having approached the Scottish camp unperceived by night, were on the point of attacking it, when one of the soldiers trod on a thistle, which caused him to cry out, and so aroused the enemy. The shamrock of Ireland was held by St. Patrick to teach the doctrine of the Trinity, and chosen in remembrance of him. It is always worn by the Irish on St. Patrick's Day. The leek, in Wales, as a national device, has not been satisfactorily explained, otherwise than as the result of its having the old Cymric colors, green and white.

FINNAN HADDOCK. This fish takes its name from the village of Finnan, in Scotland, where it is cured in perfection. It differs from the common haddock in two respects. It is only slightly salted and smoked, and only the small fish are cured in this manner. Owing to the slight salting and smoking, the haddock will not keep long, therefore it is not often shipped to places far away. We rarely get the genuine Scotch fish here, but a good article is sold under that name. Finnan haddock should only be broiled. Wash the fish in warm water and wipe it dry. Place it in the double broiler and cook it over coals for twelve minutes. Place on a warm dish and spread generously with butter. Serve at once.

FRIED CODFISH. Have the fish nicely dressed and split, cut in pieces as large as the hand, roll in meal, and lay in a pan in which there is plenty of hot fat; salt to taste, and fry until nicely browned. Be careful in turning the fish that it does not break. Always put your fish in the pan the flesh side down; after that is well browned, turn and brown the skin.

CODFISH CHOWDERS are very nice for breakfast, as it takes but a short time to prepare them. To make fresh cod chowder, place pieces of round fish in a kettle with a few sliced potatoes, add a little water, not quite enough to cover the fish, salt and pepper to taste. Stew until the bones cleave from the flesh readily. Have ready one tablespoonful of corn starch mixed smooth, add this and a piece of butter the size of an egg. Let this scald and you will have a most excellent chowder.

SALT FISH CHOWDER. Strip into shreds and remove all bones from one and one-half pounds of salt cod, put over the fire and simmer slowly for one-half hour, changing the water until properly freshened, then add one pint of milk, one tablespoonful of butter, one teaspoonful of dissolved corn starch, and a dusting of pepper. Let this come to a boil and dish immediately.

FISH BALLS. To make fish balls, take one-half of a medium sized cod, strip off the skin and soak in warm water two hours. If you use pickled fish it will require a longer time. Thoroughly wash two quarts of potatoes, put them in a kettle in which there is enough boiling water to a little more than cover them. Place your soaked fish in a bag, tie firmly, and when the potatoes have boiled ten minutes, put in the fish and boil until the potatoes are done. Peel and mash them while hot, remove all bones from the fish, and mix thoroughly. Form into flat cakes, roll in flour, and fry in hot fat until nicely browned. To be eaten as soon as taken from the pan.

TAINTED BLOOD,

SCROFULOUS, INHERITED AND CONTAGIOUS HUMORS CURED BY CUTICURA

[illegible] Mr. Frank T. Wray, Druggist, [illegible] Cuticura [illegible] permanently cured [illegible] the worst cases of [illegible] erysipelas [illegible] I have ever seen [illegible] order that other sufferers [illegible] give your Cuticura Remedies a trial.

[illegible] WHITINGER, Leechburg, Pa.

Reference: FRANK T. WRAY, Druggist, [illegible]

SCROFULOUS ULCERS

James E. Richardson, Custom House, New Orleans, [illegible] on oath says: In 1870 Scrofulous Ulcers broke out on my body until I was a mass of corruption. Everything known to the medical faculty was tried in vain. [illegible] times [illegible] not lift my hands to my head, could not turn in bed [illegible] constant pain [illegible] looked upon life as a curse. No relief or cure in ten years. In 1880 I heard of the Cuticura Remedies, used them, and was perfectly cured.

Sworn to before U. S. Com. J. D. CRAWFORD.

ONE OF THE WORST CASES

We have been selling your Cuticura Remedies for years, and have the first complaint yet to receive from a purchaser. One of the worst cases of Scrofula I ever saw was cured by the use of five bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, Cuticura and Cuticura Soap. The Soap takes the cake here as a medicinal soap.

TAYLOR & TAYLOR, Druggists, Frankfort, Kan.

SCROFULOUS, INHERITED

And Contagious Humors with Loss of Hair, and Eruptions of the skin are positively cured by Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally and Cuticura Resolvent internally when all other medicines fail. Send for pamphlet.

DRUGGISTS USE THEM

We have obtained satisfactory results from the use of the Cuticura Remedies in our own family, and recommend them beyond any other remedies for diseases of the skin and blood. The demand for them grows as their merits become known.

MACMILLAN & CO., Druggists, Latrobe, Pa.

CUTICURA REMEDIES

are sold everywhere. Price: Cuticura, the great Skin Cure, 50 cts.; Cuticura Soap, an Exquisite Beautifier, 25 cts.; Cuticura Resolvent, the New Blood Purifier, $1.00. POTTER DRUG & CHEMICAL Co., Boston.

PIMPLES, Blackheads, Skin Blemishes and Baby Humors use Cuticura Soap.

Choking Catarrh.

Have you awakened from a disturbed sleep with all the horrible sensations of an assassin clutching your throat and pressing the life breath from your tightened chest? Have you noticed the languor and debility that succeed the effort to clear your throat and head of this catarrhal matter? What a depressing influence it exerts upon the mind, clouding the memory and filling the head with pains and strange noises. How difficult it is to rid the nasal passages, throat and lungs of this poisonous mucus all can testify who are afflicted with catarrh. How difficult to protect the system against its further progress towards the lungs, liver and kidneys all physicians will admit. It is a terrible disease and cries out for relief and cure.

The remarkable curative powers, when all other remedies utterly fail, of Sanford's Radical Cure, are attested by thousands who gratefully recommend it to fellow sufferers. No statement is made regarding it that cannot be substantiated by the most respectable and reliable references.

Each packet contains one bottle of the Radical Cure, one box of Catarrhal Solvent and an Improved Inhaler, with treatise and directions, and is sold by all druggists for $1.00.
